Fall 2012 recipients of these grants will be holding a panel discussion to share their experiences in their classrooms and to address any questions that faculty may have regarding the process of getting and implementing their grants. You are especially encouraged to attend this panel discussion if you are interested in applying for an innovation grant for the Summer and Fall of 2013. Please send us an email at kolt@ku.edu.tr if you are planning to attend this panel discussion.

KOLT Lunch Workshop Coming Up in March, 2013

Title: Team-Based Learning: How and Why it Works*
Date: Wednesday, March 27, 2013, 12:30-13:30
Place: Student Center, -3, 329
Presenter: Robynn Allveri (BLAW)

Lunch will be served.

This workshop introduces Team-Based Learning (TBL), an especially useful method for teaching large classes (50+ students). However, even small classes can benefit from TBL in terms of increased student motivation, class participation and deeper learning.

TBL also teaches students how to work with others who have diverse personalities and ways of thinking.

Attendees will learn the basic steps in creating an effective TBL module for the classroom. They will also get the chance to play the role of students by participating in an actual TBL exercise. Even those who have heard of TBL (or experimented with their own versions of TBL) will benefit from seeing the process in action.

Attendees who read (or at least skim) the PDF document to be sent via e-mail prior to the workshop will get the most out of the planned TBL activity.

Workshop presenter Robynn Allveri is a member of the Law Faculty and was introduced to TBL at a recent conference in San Diego, California.

* This workshop aims to disseminate the knowledge gained from “13th Annual Team Based Learning Conference” held February 28- March 2, 2013 in San Diego. Attending this conference was awarded by KOLT Teaching Innovation Grant, Fall 2012.
